NEW YORK MAYOR

Al Smith May Contest Office.

New York.

With the political retirement of Joseph V. McKee, erstwhile mayor, reports increased that Mr. Alfred E. Smith may seek the mayoralty of New York City this fall.

Former Governor Smith has kept free from political office since his defeat for the presidency by Mr. Herbert Hoover in 1928, when he was the Democratic nominee.

MORATORIUM MAY BE GRANTED

IF RESULTS AT GENEVA ARE SATISFACTORY

WITHOUT GUARANTEE, FRANCE MAY DEFAULT JUNE PAYMENT

WASHINGTON, TO-DAY.

THE EVENTS AT GENEVA ARE BEING CLOSELY FOLLOWED HERE, FOR IT IS GENERALLY BELIEVED THAT THEY WILL PROVIDE THE KEY TO THE WAR DEBT PROBLEM.

If the results at Geneva are satisfactory, President Roosevelt will almost certainly ask Congress to take some action before the June instalments become due, and should it be demonstrated that a moratorium is essential to the success of the Conference, the President is ready to defy the Congressional Opposition and demand the necessary powers.

One of the President's difficulties is that France is opposed to paying the December instalment without a guarantee of a moratorium, while Congress is not willing to even consider a moratorium until the instalment is paid.—Reuter.

Two Politicians In U.S. France Expects 50 Per Cent. Cut.

MR. HULL SATISFIED WITH PRELIMINARY TALKS.

New York, To-day.

In order that political difficulties may not impede the progress of the World Economic Conference, the United States delegation will include two experienced politicians, according to newspaper reports here.

The report add that the Secretary of State, Mr. William Cordell Hull, who is heading the American delegation, is so satisfied with the preliminary conversations that he expects agreement on some of the general questions, within two months.

"Double" Against Yanks Division Of Spoils.

HILDEBRAND'S PITCHING

New York, To-day.

St. Louis Browns robbed the New York Yankees of the leadership of the American League yesterday when they held them to a division of spoils in the "double header."

The Indians won their "double" against the Athletics and are now on top. Hildebrand blanked the Athletics in the first game.

The Giants beat the Pirates in the National League and shortened their deficit.

CANTON BUREAU OF INFORMATION

Tourists And Visitors Welcome.

PROMOTING FOREIGN TRADE RELATIONS

Canton, To-day.

Under the authority of the Kwangtung Provincial Government, the Bureau of Information has now opened its principal office at No. 25, Shakes Road, near the East bridge.

Its purposes are, as in similar offices in foreign countries, to furnish information and data whenever possible, regarding the trade, commerce, industries, economic conditions, and projects in the way or outlined in the programme of the Three Year Plan of the Kwangtung Government.

FILM STARS ARRIVE IN HONG KONG

Wheeler And Woolsey Of Comedy Fame.

NO PERSONAL APPEARANCES IN COLONY.

Wheeler and Woolsey, the famous motion-picture comedy team, who arrived in the Colony, by the s.s. President Hoover, this morning, and are now staying at the Peninsula Hotel, were met on their arrival by a small number of film "fans," and several amateur photographers assembled on the wharf to snap them.

The two comedians patiently posed for them, and then departed by car for the Hotel. Mrs. Woolsey is accompanying her husband on his round the world trip.

They are to stay in the Colony until Saturday, when they will leave for Singapore on the s.s. Carthage. They intend, however, if possible, to include Manila in their itinerary.

The two stars are due back in Hollywood on August 1, and in order to arrive in time, they are going to travel light, from now onwards. From Singapore they intend to fly to Europe.

Mr. Wheeler, in an interview with the China Mail, said that owing to the rush they would have to miss many of the interesting sights in the East. However, the two stars intend to make another trip to the East in December, when they will call at Hong Kong again. The next trip will be only from America to the Far East and home again.

JAPANESE VANGUARDS NEAR TANGSHAN

3,000 CHINESE CASUALTIES IN 3 DAYS AT NANTIENMEN

INVADERS SMASH THROUGH DEFENCES.

PEKING, TO-DAY.

WITH AN AERIAL AND ARTILLERY BOMBARDMENT CLEARING THE PATH, THE JAPANESE ARE SMASHING THEIR WAY THROUGH THE CHINESE DEFENCES, INFLECTING ENORMOUS CASUALTIES ON ALL FRONTS.

The Chinese admit to having suffered 3,000 casualties in the past three days at Nantienmen, from which they retired after the fortifications had been pounded to bits.

Meanwhile the Japanese who crossed the Luan River are driving back the Chinese and it is reliably reported that the Japanese vanguards are not far from Tangshan.—Reuter.

Chinese Protest C.E.R. GUNFIRE HEARD AT TANGSHAN.

MOSCOW DISREGARDS TREATY OBLIGATIONS.

Nanking, To-day.

An emphatic protest against the sale of Soviet interests in the Chinese Eastern Railway is contained in a Note despatched to Moscow, in which China says the Soviet's contemplated action shows a disregard of Treaty obligations as well as an inclination to conclude an unlawful transaction with an unlawful regime.

The Note says that under the 1924 Agreements the Soviet has absolutely no right to assign in any form its interests in the Railway without China's consent, and declares the suggested transfer of the Soviet's interests will be tantamount to "recognising Manchukuo and aiding Japan."

The Note concludes by hoping Japan will reconsider its decision.—Reuter.

Warlords Differ In Szechuan.

HOSTILITIES RENEWED.

Shanghai, To-day.

A special message to the "China Press" from Chungking states that hostilities have again broken out among the Szechuan Generals.

The troops of General Liu Wenhui have ousted the Provincial Chairman and have occupied Wenhsiang, driving out the forces of General Tse Hai-shan.—Reuter.

Japanese Troops March Towards Peking.

Peking, To-day.

It is reported that the Japanese troops which crossed the Luanho are marching down the Shantai-Kuan-Peking Road towards Tangshan.

The situation at Luanchow is obscure as telegraphic communications have broken down since Saturday night.

Large bodies of Chinese troops, it is reported, are concentrating at Tangshan and Tanghsiao, where gunfire is plainly audible.

The Japanese aircraft-carrier which has been lying off Taku has moved and is now lying off the mouth of the Luan River.—Reuter.

FREE STATE TRADE WITH BRITAIN.

Dublin, To-day.

The Irish Free State Government has decided to extend the bounty system on exports to British and North Ireland to a number of manufactures, including linen and cotton goods.

The bounty has hitherto been confined to agricultural produce.—Reuter.

ELMIST Gervais has been named as the new Minister of Agriculture in the French Government.—Reuter.

GERMANY REPLIES

VON PAPEN HITS BACK AT LORD HAILSHAM

Militarist Outburst At Demonstration.

LEAGUE CRITICISED

Berlin, To-day.

The first official expression of the resentment felt in Germany at the speech made by the British War Minister, Lord Hailsham, in the House of Lords, last Thursday, was voiced yesterday, by Captain Von Papen, former Chancellor, and now Vice-Chancellor in the Hitler Cabinet.

In an address to a large gathering at a joint demonstration by the Nazi Storm Troops and "Steel Helmets," at Muenster, Captain Von Papen defiantly replied to Lord Hailsham. His outburst came as a surprise, as no official declaration was expected before Chancellor Hitler's statement of Disarmament policy to be made at the special session of the Reichstag called for Wednesday.

The Vice-Chancellor declared that this War Minister of a foreign Power, who spoke of sanctions, obviously did not know what hypocrisy it was to arouse, in the League of Nations, sanctions against a Power which is doing no more than moral treaties while the same League was not taking any measures against the Powers who are waging war.

It is understood that Chancellor Hitler will also reply to the speech made by Lord Hailsham, which is regarded as far exceeding any attacks hitherto made, and which has forced the German Government to break her silence.

The juridical result of any breaking-away from the Disarmament Conference by Germany would be that Germany would be bound by the provisions of the Treaty of Versailles, declared Lord Hailsham, Minister of War, during his statement to the House.

"Pacific literature has tried to make out that a man who dies on the battlefield dies an unnatural death; but the battlefield is for man what motherhood is for woman," was one of the remarkable phrases coined by Captain Von Papen, who was loudly cheered by his vast audience.—Reuter.

NAZI PROTEST TO AUSTRIA

Resentment At "Snub" By Premier.

NAZI PARTIS VISIT TO VIENNA.

Vienna, To-day.

Germany is to make a strong diplomatic protest to Austria following the official "snub" administered to the Nazi envoys headed by Dr. Frank.

The unsought presence of the party of prominent German Nazis, headed by Dr. Frank, was commented upon by Dr. Dollfus, the Austrian Prime Minister, during his speech of reconciliation in Vienna last night.

Dr. Dollfus emphasized Austria's freedom not only from the Nazis but also from other "international parasites."

Composing Summer's Wardrobe

Individual Print A Necessity.

WHITE FOR EVENING

Whether you bought a suit for Easter or not, you'll find yourself needing various other costumes to round out your wardrobe, this season.

These, in the best circles, come in those elegant things that we call "lady clothes."

They have suave lines, are made of exquisite fabrics, have necklines, sleeves and other touches that are individual and, above all, make you look like a million when you wear them.

If it is a separate dress that you need, get one that makes a lovely picture on the street. Certain unusual shades of new crepes, in violet, fuchsia, greens that have much blue in them and soft, exquisite blues, are exceptionally good. Have your hat match, and then, with suitable accessories, you're all ready for spring.

You will want at least one print. Get an ensemble of dress and matching coat and your afternoons will be hours of pleasant pride. Particularly if you pick one of the individual prints, preferably a formalized pattern, since they look dressier than the dotted or striped designs.

Then you'll probably want at least one white dress that is handsome and smart. If you plan it with a wrappy coat of some kind, you have an entirely new costume. Particularly if your hat is white, too.

For Day Wear.

For day wear, you can even get a suit that looks like a street dress, yet has its own jacket, for warmth as well as smartness. Remember that grey, beige and blue are the three most popular shades to pick, the three that you'll have least trouble getting accessories for.

And when planning these new things, remember that after Lent—come the parties. No wardrobe is complete without a party dress. The little evening ensemble that takes its own jacket has become almost ubiquitous as a first choice with smart women. Why not? It gives a double service, for dinner and informal evenings, with the jacket on. And for formal evenings, with the jacket off.

White, of course, is the ideal first choice for a smart evening dress that takes a coloured jacket to top it. This year you can have yours of organdy, crepe silk, pique, sheer wool, chiffon or lace or embroidery. But the white dress that everybody will envy you is the one that manages to look very, very smart and just a trifle tailored.

DAYTIME DRESSES IMPORTANT.

Paris Couturiers Realise This.

Although daytime dresses never have the spectacular interest of frocks for evening wear, they are undoubtedly of more importance to the average woman than any other type of costume.

Paris couturiers, realise this, and particularly of recent years, have been devoting a great deal of attention to this type of dress, with the result that daytime costumes are not only practicable, but noteworthy from the standpoint of line and colour.

Menu Suggestions For To-morrow

Dinner Menu.
Crab Escallop Buttered Onions
Biscuits Honey
Head Lettuce Relish Dressing
Plum Sauce Coconut Cookies
Coffee

Crab Escallop.
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon celery salt
1/4 teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon chopped pimientos
1/4 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 cup crab meat
1/4 cup crumbs
2 tablespoons butter, melted
Melt 4 tablespoons butter and add flour. Mix well and add milk and cook until creamy sauce forms. Add seasonings and oregano and pour into buttered shallow baking dish. Sprinkle with crumbs which have been mixed with melted butter. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven.

Relish Dressing.
1/4 cup French dressing

1 tablespoon chopped pickle
1 tablespoon chopped olive
2 tablespoons catsup
Mix and chill ingredients. Serve poured over lettuce or vegetable salads.

Tea Buns.
1 cake compressed yeast
1/3 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons fat
3 2/3 cups flour
1/2 cup currants
Crumble yeast in bowl. Scald milk, and cool until lukewarm. Add 2 tablespoons milk and 1 tablespoon sugar to yeast and let stand 5 minutes. Add rest of sugar and milk, salt, fat melted and 1/2 the flour. Beat 3 minutes. Add remaining flour and currants. Cover and let rise until doubled in bulk. It will require about 4 hours. Roll out dough and cut out buns 1 1/2 inches in diameter and arrange side by side on greased baking sheet. Allow to double in size, brush over tops with 2 tablespoons milk. Bake 15 minutes in moderate oven. If desired, frosting can be placed on tops of buns.

"CODDLING" THE COMPLEXION.

The Expert Says "Treat Is Rough."

It was a well-known London skin specialist who astounded a company of people by proclaiming a straight-forward theory of 'treat 'em rough' in relation to complexions. Like many ideas which at first seem revolutionary, it was found on examination to have much sound sense and logic behind it, and it has proved itself in practice.

We know that protection and gentle methods are the main tenets of expensive beauty treatments, and there is profit for the beauty.

BRIDGE NOTES

PRE-EMPTIVE BIDS AT BRIDGE OFTEN CONFUSE PARTNERS.

CALL OF THREE IN MINOR SUITS SHOULD BE AVOIDED

Any bid at Bridge of more than two is a double-edged weapon;
unless the hand contains at least seven tricks in attack and two in defence, such a declaration is not only useless but bad. It acts as an incitement to the opponents to call when otherwise they might remain silent, and it deters the partner from showing the value of his hand except by raises in the suit called —and the suit may not be solid,
with consequent disaster.

While a certain latitude may be granted where there is a part score, the following observations may be said to apply to all original bids of three.

1. Do not call a minor suit unless it is solid and unless it contains an outside trick, e.g., on Club
A, K, Q, J, x, x, x, Diamond A, x, x, Heart x, x, Spade x, Three Clubs is a reasonable bid, as it offers a more-than-even chance of game to a partner who makes a speculative Three No Trump response. But on Club A, K, Q, J, x, x, x, Diamond x, x, Heart x, x, Spades x, Three Clubs is a bad original bid, because:

- (a) It is easily over-bid.
- (b) The hand has no defensive value.
- (c) If the partner responds with another suit, the only reply is to re-bid the Clubs. A possible game in No Trumps may then be missed.

As a general rule, the bid of three in a minor suit is to be avoided, and on either of the above hands the best declaration is One Club.

2. Do not call three of a major suit unless there is a good chance of game when raised to four on two quick tricks without the usual trump support. The difference between pre-emptive bids in major and in minor suits is that in the former case the suit called need not be solid.

THREE SPADE BIDS.

The following types of Three Spade bids are recommended:
Club K, x, Diamond x, Heart A, x, x, Spade K, Q, J, 10, 9, x, x, Club K, J, x, x, Diamond x, Heart
x, Spade A, Q, J, 9, x, x, x,
Club x, Diamond Q, J, 10, x,
Heart A, x, Spade K, Q, J, 10, x, x, Club x, x, Diamond A, K, Heart
x, Spade K, J, 10, 9, x, x, x,
But not—
Club—Diamond K, x, x, Heart x, x, Spade A, Q, 10, x, x, x, x, or
Club K, Q, Diamond x, x, Heart
K, x, x, Spade K, Q, 10, x, x, x.

Length in a suit is always the strongest reason for a pre-emptive bid; but it must not be the only reason.
There is no justification for bidding Three Spades on either of the last two hands, because if the partner has what is required for a game contract he will either have good support for an original One Spade bid or an alternative call.

The defenceless nature of these hands must not be conveyed by a bid of three, for the partner will never, then, be able to double the opponents with safety.

If the partner has two Aces and a single Spade, he is justified in assuming that the declarer cannot fall by more than one trick in a four contract; in either of these cases he is liable to be severely disillusioned.

On many occasions when mishaps through bad pre-emptive bidding occur the original crime is often overlooked. The declarer says, after losing two thousand points in Four Spades doubled and redoubled, "Oh, partner, how could you support me on a single trump!"

or "How can one anticipate a distribution with King Jack to five trumps in one hand?" But all the trouble arose with the declarer's three bid on insufficient strength.

Weak pre-emptive bids, though frequently penalised, as often achieve their object in saving the game, and so any loss is not so great as might appear. The real disaster occurs when an unnecessarily high declaration shuts out the partner, and bidding dies before game is reached or when game is bid in the wrong suit.

UNSUITED TO HIGH DECLARATION

It was thought at one time that a hand could never be too good for a pre-emptive bid, and some peculiarly anachronistic "experts" in America have endeavoured to conclude a bid of three into a forcing bid. A high original declaration, however, is bound to prevent all but a modicum of information being given, and it is impossible to lay down any rules for responses to a pre-emptive forcing bid, for the partner can never be sure whether the forcing bid is made on a long strong suit with three outside tricks or on a very strong hand with an even distribution.

The following is a hand eminently unsuited to a high original declaration:
Spade A, x, x, Heart A, K, Q, x, x, x, x, Diamond x, x, Club A, x, x,
as a bid of Three Hearts inevitably suggests the declarer's desire to shut out some particular suit. The partner in this instance was dealt:
Spade K, 10, x, x, x, Heart—
Diamond K, 10, x, x, Club x, x, x, and very naturally said No Bid,
and so a laid down game in Spades was missed.

The following opening declarations of Three Clubs led to easy games being missed, and may serve to further my argument that pre-emptive in minor suits hamper partners far more than opponents:

(1) Spade—Heart x, x, x, Dia-

LESSON SERMON.

First Church of Christ, Scientist—Hong Kong.

"Mortals and immortals" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon
in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 14.

The Golden Text was: "Thou art no more a servant, but a son;
and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ" (Gal. 4: 7).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law. I am a stranger in the earth; hide not thy commandments from me. Give me understanding, and I shall keep thy law; yea, I shall observe it with my whole heart. . . . So shall I keep thy law continually for ever and ever. And I will walk at liberty: for I seek thy precepts." (Ps. 119: 18, 19, 34, 44, 45).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook: "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The enslavement of man is not legitimate. It will cease when man enters into his heritage of freedom, his god-given dominion over the material senses. Mortals will some day assert their freedom in the name of almighty God." (p. 228: 11).

Partner held Spade 10, 9, x,
Heart A, Q, 10, x, Diamond Q,
x, x, x, Club x, x, and bid Three No Trumps. He was left and failed by a trick, whereas Five Clubs is laid down and would have been reached by a bid of One Heart over an opening of One Club.

Rabelaisian rivals of "What Price

Piquant little Miss Lupe Velez

"GRAND HOTEL"—STAR THEATRE.

Greta Garbo, in the part of the Russian dancer Grusinskaya, dominates the rest of the brilliant cast in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's latest success "Grand Hotel."
Greta Garbo gives a magnificent and magnetic performance which rank as one of her greatest roles.
Joan Crawford makes a capital Flammchen, the conscienceless tyrant, and Wallace Beery an excellent Freysing. Lionel Barrymore's impersonation of the downtrodden little clerk Kringelein, is easily the most notable. John Barrymore, in the youthful role of the Baron, also gives an accomplished performance.

WHEN DEATH COMES CLOSE.

Viscountess Rhondda's
Striking Book.

"THIS WAS MY WORLD."

London.

There is some strong stuff in "This Was My World" (Macmillan, 10/6) in which Viscountess Rhondda, the daughter of the first Lord Rhondda, the Food Controller towards the end of the World War, recounts her experiences.

She has been imprisoned as a Suffragette, she was picked up for dead after the sinking of the Lusitania—and she refers to her marriage as "an uncomfortable life sentence."

Lady Rhondda stated that the task her father undertook as Food Controller in 1917 killed him. A doctor warned him that his heart could not stand the strain of hard work—but he insisted on working at enormous pressure.

"He refused to touch his ration of sugar," she recalls. "We never knew till it was too late that a man with a bad heart, who was working at full pitch, needed, according to medical theory, his quota of sugar. From Monday to Friday he ate no meat at all."

"Every day the official bag from the Food Ministry arrived and he would go through all the papers it contained. Often he was so tired that he dropped asleep as he read."

Lusitania Wreck Echo. Her father was with her on board the Lusitania when that ship was struck by a German torpedo. She gives grim and vivid impressions of her experience.

When she reached the deck a stream of steerage passengers rushed up from below and fought their way to a boat.

"They were white-faced and terrified; I think they were shrieking," she records, "there was no kind of order—the strongest got there first, the weak were pushed aside."

She had to turn away. "It was not safe to look at horrible things just then. Even at that moment death would have seemed better than to make part of that terror-infected crowd."

She went down with the ship. "I was sucked right down with her. It was very dark, nearly black. I fought to come up. I was terrified of being caught on some part of the ship and kept down. That was the worst moment of terror, the only moment of acute terror, that I knew."

Taken As Dead.

Clutching a bit of board, she managed to survive that awful tragedy. Terrible scenes were being enacted round her. Bitter cold gripped her. But she was not really afraid.

"When death is as close as he was then," writes Lady Rhondda, "the sharp agony of fear is not there; the thing is too overwhelming and stunning for that."

She was picked up by a boat and taken on board the Bluebell. They thought she was dead. Sailors, however, applied artificial respiration and she recovered.

When landed from the Bluebell at Queenstown Harbour, she saw at the end of the gangway—her father.—Reuter.

VICKI BAUM'S NEW BOOK.

Irritating Character In "Martin's Summer."

It is a pity that Martin Hall in Miss Vicki Baum's book is so irritating.

He has so many charms—a perfect physique, youth, good looks—that the whole female population of Fraunceuse, a lake town in the Austrian Tyrol succumbs on sight. A penniless young engineer, he tries to earn money during the holiday season by teaching swimming.

His susceptibility to women and his general inability to manage his affairs, business or other, with even a modicum of sense make one impatient of his misfortunes.

On the whole, sympathy is with the prospective father-in-law, who asks if "Martin is a congenital idiot."

Apart from this "Martin's Summer" (Doubleday, 7s. 6d.) contains delightful character sketches of odd people such as Miss Baum's pen can draw so successfully.

Jealousy In High Politics

Joseph Chamberlain The "Cheesemonger"

HIS "DIRTY" TRANSACTION

Joseph Chamberlain was the first man to emerge from the tradesman-middle class into the limelight of the world of politics.

Peel, Gladstone and Mr. Baldwin were all the sons of their fathers, the soil of whose achievement went with them into the ground, and who sent their boys to Eton and Harrow, Christ Church or Trinity.

Chamberlain rose directly from the manufacture of screws and the Birmingham Town Council to the second highest position in the State. Three years after his death Mr. Lloyd George rose from a lower rung of the ladder to a higher position.

The means of ascent were in both cases the same, are always the same—attacks upon established institutions and the possessors of wealth and privilege. The doctrine of ransom was echoed with filial piety from Newcastle to Limehouse.

Joseph Chamberlain entered the House of Commons at a by-election in 1876, about three weeks before Disraeli left it for "another place." It is amusing to speculate how Disraeli, if he had remained where he was, would have dealt with the Brummagem Robespierre. The two men were antipodean in outlook and temperament, and in their reactions.

Seeing Red.

Disraeli called "Victoria" the Faery Queen, and in describing her first Council "in a palace in a garden," and her receipt of the customary kiss, spoke of "that soft hand which might inspire troubadours and guerdon knights." Mr. Chamberlain, in describing the same ceremony by a batch of Privy Counsellors, writes, "and then a small fat red hand was thrust quickly under each of our noses and respectfully mumbled by us."

I don't believe Queen Victoria's hands were red. It was Joe Chamberlain who saw red, or perhaps it was the reflection of his necktie. Lord Beaconsfield was childishly annoyed by Lady Bradford's calling the Mayor of Birmingham a great man, and wrote to his lady-love, "I went this morning to the House of Commons, and saw Mr. Chamberlain, who looked and spoke like a cheese-monger." This was ill-natured, for at that time Chamberlain was handsome and spruce. It is true his dandyism was a trifle provincial, and that he wore elastic-side boots, make-up ties, etc. Could it have been that the aged Dizzy declined to be jealous? It is a foible for old lovers.

"A Dangerous Man."

Chamberlain's career is divided into three phases.

(1) There was the Jacobinical phase, from 1880 to 1885, when he was fighting the Whigs, Gladstone, and Hartington, hacking his way to the front, and when he was regarded by the majority of his countrymen with dislike and terror, as "a dangerous man." These were the days of partnership with his evil genius Dilke, of half-hearted republicanism, of "They tell not neither do they spin" and such like rubbish.

(2) There was the phase of Imperialism, when, being discredited by Dilke, and becoming critical—shall we say jealous?—of Morley, he stood forth as the champion of the Union with Ireland, and later as the coadjutor of Rhodes in the Boer War. This phase lasted from 1885 to Lord Salisbury's retirement in 1902, during which he was only half-trusted by the Moderate Tories.

(3) There was the final apogee of Tory Reform, when he had an enthusiastic following, scattered amongst all parties, and now, like Disraeli, a posthumous glory. The five years between 1880 and 1885 are among the most disgraceful of dabbings in the occult.

HORRORS, TERRORS AND QUAKES.

To make the flesh creep and the hair stand on end is the object of Messrs. Philip Allan in adding to their Craze Series.

The latest three volumes—"Horror," "Terror," and "Quakes" (2s. 6d. each)—should delight in "horror" murders, the queer kinds of insanity and their outcome, and the sinister possibilities of dabbling in the occult.

Officer In Charge Of Lighthouses.

INSTITUTE OF ENGINEERS AND SHIPBUILDERS.

Mr. G. F. Taylor, Officer in Charge of Lighthouses, Hong Kong, who is leaving the Colony on retirement, by the s.s. Carthage on May 20, was last night presented with a gold wrist watch and a cheque, by Mr. G. Tully, President of the Institute of Engineers and Shipbuilders, on behalf of the members.

The presentation took place at a smoking concert, held at the Institute under the Chairmanship of Mr. P. T. Farrell. About one hundred members attended to farewell Mr. Taylor.

Mr. Tully, in making the presentation referred to Mr. Taylor's sojourn of 32 years in the Colony, and to the services rendered by him to the Institute, in the positions of Vice-President, Chairman, and Vice-Chairman mentioning his enthusiasm for wireless, he described him as the pioneer of broadcasting in the Colony.

Mr. Taylor in thanking the members of the Institute for the mark of appreciation they had shown him, stated that he had always endeavoured to give of his utmost in the service of the Institute, and owing to the co-operation of other members had been enabled to attain good results.

He denied the rumour that he intended to return to the Colony, but stated that he would settle down in England. Referring to his position as billiards handicapper, he stated that he had obtained much pleasure when occupying this position, and had made many friends.

NAPOLEON'S PRIVATE LIBRARY

Britisher's Gift To France.

6,000 VOLUMES

Berlin. An English millionaire, Mr. Jaffe, is reported by a local newspaper to have bought the private library of Napoleon for presentation to the French nation.

The library, which consists of 6,000 volumes, suddenly appeared for sale in a German bookshop, after it had lain unheeded for years in the possession of the family of Napoleon's Austrian wife, Marie Louise. It was put up for sale by one of the Austrian Archdukes. For the last few years the firm has made continuous efforts to sell the library, having resolved to break it up and sell it by separate volumes if no purchaser could be found for the whole.

The French government, through the Ambassador in Berlin, began to take an interest in the library and many French people demanded that it should be bought by the nation. The library was then transferred to France and an attempt made to collect the money needed to buy it. But all appeals were without avail. There was no one

It is now reckoned,—thanks to British engineering enterprise—that one of the finest harbours in the Eastern Mediterranean will be completed this Autumn. The grand inauguration ceremony has been fixed for a day in October.

Energy Becomes Matter.

As they left church, Johnson and Boswell discussed Berkeley's theory that matter exists only in the mind. When Boswell remarked that it was impossible to refute the doctrine the Doctor kicked a stone. "I refute it thus." Practical men will applaud. A modern physicist would say that the Doctor had proved nothing but his own inability to understand what Berkeley was driving at. The notion of substance, as Dr. Johnson conceived it, is abolished as the chief characteristic of matter. Between mass and energy there is no longer any fundamental difference. Everything in the universe is reduced to mere bits or charges of electricity—energy. Tear away electrons from atoms, send them rushing through air in a lightning bolt or coursing through a wire and we have electricity. If mass and energy are the same, it ought to be possible to convert one into the other. Exactly this was mathematically proved to be possible in the first of Einstein's theories of relativity. Increase the speed of your matter and it will gain in mass, reads the formula. Jeans even went so far as to calculate that the 50,000-ton Mauretania at twenty-five knots gains in weight about the millionth part of an ounce. At the speed of light her mass would be infinite. Similarly, if we want to lose mass we have only to slow our matter down. All this seemed pretty mathematical quibbling until Drs. Kaufmann and Bucherer independently studied the beta particles of radium—electrons moving almost with the speed of light. The Einsteinian prediction was verified. An electron did indeed gain mass with speed. We turn now to lithium. Bombard it with a fast alpha particle, it becomes a neutron and boron. This is startling enough, but still more startling is the fact that the two end-products are together more massive than was the original lithium and boron.

barbing alpha particle. To explain this, Dr. Bainbridge of the Bartol Foundation ingeniously suggests that we may have an actual case of energy transformed into mass. No other theory so plausibly explains what has been observed. The implications of these new views are far-reaching. Dr. Jeans has been telling us that the stars are radiating themselves away as their matter is being converted into energy—light and heat. What becomes of all that radiance in a closed system? A few bold astronomers have ventured the suggestion that perhaps it may be turned back into matter and thus eventually into stars, only to dismiss the thought as too preposterous. Yet there are the Einsteinian equations and the experimental proof that energy can be reconverted into matter. It is very much as if radio waves were to be changed back into matter out of which broadcasting tubes and coils can be made. It is time for a new Jules Verne or H. G. Wells to appear and translate these more obvious consequences of the new physical theories and discoveries into dreams as likely to be realized as "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea."

The Holy Year.

While many people will not find it possible to support every doctrine of the allocation proclaiming the Holy Year ushered in by the opening of the Holy Door with pomp and penance, there will be a general joining in the hope that it will be "a year of spiritual exaltation" not only for "the whole Christian world" but for "all mankind." And from this spiritual lifting up of hearts and minds a beneficent relief is looked for, "obtained from divine mercy by a universal concert of prayers and good work." "drawing down the necessary light and still more necessary concord upon the conferences and conversations that will take place precisely during the Holy Year for world economic adjustment, for disarmament (may it be effective materially) and for war debts." "Verily," said Liberty H. Bailey, author of "The Holy Earth," "the earth is divine, because man did not make it." We are under obligation to take part and do our best, "living with path and with all the creatures." We may not know the full plan, but that does not alter the relation. When once we set ourselves to the pleasure of our dominion, reverently and hopefully, and assume all its responsibilities, "we shall have a new hold on life." It is rather to reconsecrate ourselves as the inhabitants of a Holy Earth that the Holy Year should be celebrated and so avail ourselves of its extraordinary benefits.

HERE, THERE
and EVERYWHERE

Mr. Lewis Einstein's Book.

There is a traditional link between American diplomacy and literature, and a Minister who has added lustre to the association in our time is Mr. Lewis Einstein.

Almost equally well known as a diplomat and as a writer on history, art and literature, Mr. Einstein has many friends in London. They will be interested to hear that he has written a new book called "Divided Loyalties," to be published in June by Colman-Sanderson in London, and simultaneously in America.

Mr. Einstein, who was American Minister at Prague from 1921 to 1930, has had more than his share of dramatic incidents in his diplomatic career.

Max Reinhardt.

Although it was announced that Max Reinhardt, the famous producer and a Jew, had been forced by the Prussian Ministry of Culture to sever his connection with the Deutsche Theatre, Berlin, the step cannot wholly be attributed to anti-Semitism. It was at least anticipated a year ago, when he declared that he would shortly retire from that theatre, where he had worked for over 30 years.

The reason given then was that as he was in charge of several other Berlin theatres, including the Grosses Schauspielhaus and the tiny Kammerspiele, as well as one in Vienna, he had too much work on his hands.

But the anti-Semitic pressure is there, of course, and Reinhardt was feeling it as long ago as July last, when he cancelled a festival programme at Salzburg owing to fierce criticism of his defence of the Jewish actor, Moskal.

Recently he left Berlin for Vienna, where he is living very quietly, speaking to no one. He claims to have no nationality at all; an Austrian court last year decided that he is a Czech.

Vicar (ringing up the exchange in a place without "automatics"): "If you know any just cause or impediment why I should not have this number, you are asked to declare it. This is the third time of asking."

How Horrid.

Langollen Urban Council wanted a caretaker for Plas Newydd, the historic house once owned by Earl Tankerville.

So they advertised.

Applicants for the post had to be married.
Mr. J. A. Davies, an expert gardener, and Miss Myfanwy Roberts, were found to be the most suitable candidates—but they were both single!

So the council has given them both the position—if they married before April 1.

It is amazing to think that even Urban Councils will descend into forms of blackmail designed to deprive a blithe, carefree bachelor of his freedom.

DANGER.

The retired officer had been endeavouring to entertain his pretty partner with all the details of some event or other in his past life.

As course followed course, the windy tale went on, till, in triumphant tones, he concluded: "And so, you see, I was vindicated at last."

"How thrilling!" said the girl, smothering a yawn. "I suppose they made you wear a red tape on your arm until the swelling went down."

CHANCELLOR HITLER'S BLUDGEON

GERMANY'S STRANGEST ALLIANCE

"STAYERS" OF THE NAZI PARTY

(By R. H. Bruce Lockhart.)

Revolutions forge strange friendships. None has been stranger than the alliance between Adolf Hitler, the painter's apprentice, and Hermann Goering, Knight of the Order "Pour le merite" and son of a Bavarian diplomat.

The "Iron Knight," as a Nazi admirer has christened Goering, was almost the first German aristocrat to join Herr Hitler's movement. It is to the credit of Hitler that he does not forget his friends, and today Hermann Goering's loyalty has raised him not only to the Speaker's chair, but also to supreme control of that well-disciplined and powerful force, the Prussian police.

What manner of man is this plump, good-looking flying "ace" who, within the space of a fortnight of his taking office, has been labelled Hitler's bludgeon?

Goering's Career.

Hermann Goering was born exactly 40 years ago in Bavaria, where his father, a Minister in the Bavarian diplomatic service, had an estate. Like most Germans of his class, the young Goering received a military education. A pupil of the famous Cadet School at Gross-Lichterfelde, he passed out in 1912 and was gazetted a lieutenant in the 112th Muelhausen Infantry Regiment.

He takes part with his regiment in the first day's fighting in France in 1914. But his restless ambition is not satisfied by trench warfare. By October, 1914, he has secured his transfer to the German Air Force as observer. Six months later he is flying his own machine. By 1916 he is already an "ace," with a large number of destroyed enemy machines to his credit.

After Richthofen's death he is the natural choice for leadership of the famous Death Squadron. He is a national hero. The highest orders adorn his broad chest. His photograph is cherished by every flapper.

The collapse of the German Empire cuts short his career, and he leaves the army in 1918 as a captain. Flying is his only asset, and he obtains a civil flying job with the Svenska Lufttrafik in Stockholm.

By 1922 he is back in Munich, married to a rich Swedish woman, the late Baroness Carin Fock. He is not yet thirty—two years younger than the strange little corporal with the toothbrush moustache who is holding fiery street-corner meetings in the Bavarian capital.

Frick (now Minister of the Interior) introduces the two men by the light of a street lamp. "Herrmann Goering—Adolf Hitler." They click heels, shake hands, and look into each other's eyes. From that moment the dashing captain is the corporal's slave. He becomes the first leader of the famous Hitler Storm Troops.

Hitler's Push.

In November, 1923, Hitler launches his Putsch. His ill-clad, ill-disciplined rabble is dispersed by a company of the Reichswehr led by a young lieutenant—Goering; however, does not run away. Severely wounded, he falls at the head of his men. In the confusion that follows he escapes—with difficulty.

A warrant is issued for Goering's arrest. Blessed with more of this world's goods than his colleagues, he is able to seek safety abroad. He visits Italy, then returns to Stockholm. His nerves are shaken, and he undergoes a cure.

In 1927 he returns to Germany under the amnesty order, and in 1928 he is elected to the Reichstag. His home is now Berlin.

As the most polished of the Nazis, Hermann Goering becomes Herr Hitler's envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary. It is Goering who builds the bridge to Hindenburg. It is Goering who makes the spectacular flight to Rome to bring the Nazi leader's greetings to Mussolini. It is Goering, the Protestant, whom Hitler sends to make his peace with the Cardinals of the Vatican.

Action Forgotten.

He has arrived. But in his new role of mediator the man of action has been forgotten. He is in danger of becoming a drawing-room diplomat. He goes to Potsdam, to dine with the ex-Crown Prince, to Friedland, to dine with the young Prince Blumberg.

His flat in the Badische Strasse is the centre of Nazi entertaining. In the flat itself, however, are indications of its owner's ruthless ambition.

On the walls are paintings of flowers—the work of his late wife, who died in 1931. But it is the writing table which rivets the attention. It is red-gold, the colour of the Prussian flag. Great iron candlesticks stand on it. Above it hangs a huge German executioner's sword. On the walls around it are photographs of Goering's friends: Hitler, Mussolini, Balbo, the ex-Kaiser, the Crown Prince, and, of course, Richthofen.

But opposite him, greeting him as he comes into the room, staring at him as he works in the candlelight—is Napoleon. The portrait is a constant reminder that Goering the diplomat is also Goering the man of action.

To-day, the revolution of March 5 has given him his chance. For the moment, almost more than Hitler himself, he occupies the centre of the German stage, arresting Ministers, storming the Communist headquarters, rapping out crisp orders to his subordinates, violently justifying his actions to the foreign journalists. He is a strange mixture of romanticism, brutality and nerves, a popular hero to the mass of German youth whose passions have been influenced by Nazi oratory, and a symbol of hatred to Jewry throughout the world.

Caribaldi used to be described as having "a heart of gold and the brains of an ox." His opponents may well question the metal of Goering's brains and heart, but none will deny that his massive figure bears a striking resemblance to a bull.

There is something bovine in the fiery tows with which he throws his cloak aside. But—and it is a big but—one wonders how far his white-hot energy is neurotic, how far the moments of exaltation are followed by hours of depression, how long the frayed nerves will stand the constant strain which they are called upon to sustain.

Revolutionaries have to work far harder than ordinary men. They require iron nerves more than iron frames, and the most successful, like Lenin and Mussolini, have been ascetics.

Miss M. E. Alves And Mr. Hamilton-Pipe.

A charming wedding took place at St. Teresa's Church, Kowloon Tong, yesterday afternoon, when Miss Maria Emilia Alves, became the wife of Mr. Frere Henry Hamilton-Pipe. The Rt. Rev. Bishop Henry Valitoria officiated.

The bride, who was given away by her father, Chev. J. M. Alves, was attended by the Misses Cynthia and Ena Alves and the Misses Betty and Carlissima Alves, as bridesmaids.

Mr. A. M. L. Alves was the best man, while Mr. A. Alves, brother of the bride acted as groomsmen.

A reception was held at "Valverde," Prince Edward Road, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Alves, the couple leaving later for Manila where the honeymoon is being spent.

SAFE-BREAKER CONVICTED

Sequel To Daring $1,700 Robbery.

SIX MONTHS' GAOL TERM

Sentence of six months' hard labour, was this morning imposed by Mr. Schofield at the Central Magistracy, on Hoi Hin, who, together with three other unknown Chinese, had broken into No. 228 Queen's Road East on the night of April 6 and had robbed the safe of $1,700. Detective Sergeant Fitches who prosecuted, said that on the night of April 6, one of the foks of a wine shop on the ground floor of No. 228 Queen's Road East, returned and found another foki of 16 years of age vomiting badly. The Police were sent for and the young foki was found to be suffering from an unknown drug, administered by the shop's cook who was missing.

A glance in the office revealed the safe door open and $1,700 in cash missing. A duplicate key was found, and inquiries resulted in the arrest of Hoi Hin.

The accused later volunteered information as to the whereabouts of the three other accused, but extradition was impossible as the spot mentioned is infested with pirates.

MAN OVERBOARD

Sampan Rescues Ferry Passenger.

Ching Chuen, a Chinese male passenger of the s.s. Kwong Chau, had a narrow escape from drowning when he accidentally fell overboard last night while the ship was proceeding through Lyeemun Pass.

His cries were heard by a sampan man who rescued and brought him in to Hong Kong.

News In Brief.

A whistle drive for service men will be held in the west lounge of the Y.M.C.A., Kowloon to-night at 8.45.

Mr. D. M. Maynard will be the speaker at to-morrow's meeting of the Rotary Club, his subject being "An Amateur Dude Wrangler."

The Government Gazette contains an order that the prison ward at the Kowloon Hospital is to be set apart for the purpose of a prison.

The sale by Public Auction of No. 26 Des Voeux Road Central, which was advertised to take place on May 17, is now postponed to a future date to be notified later.

His Excellency the Governor has appointed Mr. D. M. MacDougall to be District Officer in the Southern District of the New Territories and also to be a Magistrate with effect from May 11, 1933.

Wai Kit, the Chinese house-boy of Inspector Doring of Yaumati Police Station, was yesterday afternoon admitted to the Kowloon Hospital, suffering from a badly lacerated right forearm, as a result of pushing his arm through a window while cleaning it.

Chu Chuen, 17, an electrician, who was employed by Messrs. W. C. Jack & Co., and who pleaded guilty to larceny of a quantity of insulated wire on Saturday last, was this morning bound over by Mr. Wynne-Jones on one surety of $50 to be of good behaviour for one year.

Wong Chan-peng, who was this morning charged before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Magistracy with larceny of a fountain pen from No. 191, Des Voeux Road Central, was bound over on one surety of $100 to be of good behaviour for one year.

JACKO IS FEATHERED DYNAMITE

Bird Who Rules The "Playground."

FIGHTS ALL-COMERS.

Sydney, N. S. Wales. With 18 knock-outs to his credit "Rattling Jacko," the fighting kookaburra of Canley Vale, near Sydney is seeking further contenders for the "feather-weight" title, which he has held against all comers—not excepting mopokes and parrots—for the past three years.

When Mr. Wilkinson, of "The Playground," Canley Vale, picked up "Jacko," ill Nourished and nearly dead, a little more than three years ago, he had no idea that he was handling feathered dynamite.

But it wasn't long before "Jacko" began to reveal his fighting traits, and there were strange happenings at "The Playground." There have been strange happenings ever since. Whenever he observes another bird aloft, "Jacko" soars to a nearby tree and sends out his challenge to the stranger, who is thereupon lured into an aerial combat.

Regardless of the size of the other bird "Jacko" will never miss the opportunity for a fight, and he has never lost a battle yet.

Wheeling, diving, soaring, "Jacko" more often than not so flusters his opponent in the first few whirlwind minutes of the fight that the rest is easy.

Rendering the other bird senseless, he catches him in beak and claws, and returns with him to "The Playground" where, under the kindly attention of Mr. Wilkinson, the sick bird is soon restored to health.

Let him try to leave, and "Jacko" is immediately on his tail—he holds his captives.

Fed regularly, the newcomer soon learns to appreciate the comforts of "The Playground," and to-day 18 birds that were "just passing that way" are in residence with "Jacko."—Reuter.

AMERICANS BRUSH UP BEER SLANG.

Schooners And Seidels For Suds.

New Year. Americans are brushing up on their beer slang now that light beer has been legalized. Here are a few from pre-prohibition days:

Suds—slang term for any kind of beer.

Seidel—a drinking vessel named from the Australian liquid measure, about 3/4 of a pint.

Schooner—a large, tall beer glass.

Stein—an earthenware or stone mug holding about a pint.

A tall one—vernacular for stein, or sometimes for schooner.

Collar or head—the inevitable cap of foam on the beer.

Bung starter—instrument for putting a keo of beer on tap.—Reuter.

CHANCELLOR HITLER'S BLUDGEON

There is nothing ascetic about Herr Goering. He has lived on excitement, and to-day there is a tall tale plumpness about that once athletic body. His Nazi admirers have compared him with Grandi, but it is hard to see any resemblance between the jerky, erratic volubility of the German airman and the controlled phlegm of the bearded Italian whose six months in London have earned him the nickname of "the silent Ambassador."

The truth is that Goering has drunk deep at the well of enjoyment of life, and for that reason his reign is likely to be short.

The "slayers" in the Nazi Party are men like Alfred Rosenberg, like Adolf Hitler himself, and even Joseph Goebbels—men who neither drink nor smoke, and who pursue their ambition with method and fanatical self-discipline. Herr Goering's candle burns too swiftly.

Unless all the signs are wrong, he will go down to history as one of those violent and not unattractive figures whose revolutions throw up in the first heat of their fire and then discard as the flames subside.

SPLENDID DANCING AT PENINSULA

Don And Sally Prove Popular Pair.

MANY GUESTS ATTEND SATURDAY'S GALA

On Saturday evening, the Rose Room of the Peninsula Hotel was filled to capacity and a large number of people were compelled to overflow into the spacious Roof Garden for accommodation for the debut of Don and Sally, dancers extraordinary.

This pair is definitely the best to have appeared in Hong Kong and the renewed and enthusiastic applause with which each of their dances were received was good proof of the excellent standard of their artistry.

They switched from the polished ball room dancing to the acrobatic adagio, and from this to the fast and syncopated one-step with the greatest ease and as a finale they teamed with those old favourites, Sands and Dawn, in a delicious number for which Mildred Dawn had unexpectedly learned some acrobatic tricks, perfectly executed, and for which she is to be sincerely congratulated.

Don and Sally are a great acquisition to the most select ball room in Hong Kong and they are sure to have a continuous and unprecedented success.

They will perform nightly in the Rose Room and for Wednesday, a special dinner dance is announced extending to 1 a.m. at which it is rumoured the famous Hollywood stars, Wheeler and Woolsey, will be present. Altogether a most enjoyable night may be anticipated.

Noted among the large crowd on Saturday were:—

WOMAN ROBBED.

Money-Changing Trick Employed.

Chan Sum, a Chinese widow, in a report to the Police stated, that while walking in Queen's Road Central at 11.45 a.m. yesterday, an unknown Chinese approached and asked her to change a bundle of banknotes for him as he was a stranger in town.

She agreed and left him some jewellery and money totalling $114 as security. She then left for a money-changer's shop a hundred yards away but on opening the bundle found it to contain waste paper.

Chan Sum returned to the spot but the stranger had disappeared.

To-Day's Short Story.

THE MAGNOLIA STREET WANDERER

By Louis Golding.

THE dark city of Doomington was where he lived. He was the sort of obscure little Jew you saw but did not look at. He might speak but you did not listen to him. Why should you?

He lived with his mother in Magnolia-street. His mother was not notable, except for the excellence of her cooking.

His first name was Hyman. There was no reason why it should not be. The family name was Lipshin. He did not resent it. If some entirely grotesque destiny had named him Porphyrogenitos Ebenzer Andritsena he would have taken no steps in the matter. He had been educated at the Aubrey-street School, not far away, where he had achieved no formidable distinction. His history was bad, his drawing was scarcely better; in geography he was top of the class. He knew where Jude came from and whether Cotopaxi was a mountain or an isthmus, and where it was. The whereabouts of Cedar Falls in Ohio did not deceive him, but he lost ground, as I have suggested, in the Wars of the Roses.

He was not elected, therefore, to any scholarship at secondary school which might have enabled him to continue his researches into the products of Sfax and the situation of Filicudi. He became an invoice clerk in Messrs. Cohen and Montague's Hat and Cap Works, where he remained for the next 20 years of his existence—uneventful existence.

Messrs. Cohen and Montague allowed him to repair home well before his mother lit the Friday evening candles on the eve of the Sabbath, nor did they expect pagan dues from him in the matter of invoice clerking on the holy day that follows. The festivals, too, remained inviolate; for though Mr. Montague was a scion of the ancient Norman aristocracy, Mr. Cohen was aware of the sacro-sanctitude of the Feast of Weeks and the Feast of Tabernacles.

Hyman Lipshin drew a dim pleasure out of the white Friday evening cloths, the serried candlesticks, the brimful wine-baker; out of the long hours of boy invocation at the little synagogue round the corner. I said his pleasure was dim, not because any other pleasures he experienced were crimson, but because he lived dimly.

NATIVE KILLS FIVE WIVES

Terrible Crime To Ensure Silence.

8 CHILDREN SPEARED

Nairobi. A terrible story is told from Uganda, where, to ensure their silence, a Mohammedan native killed his five wives, speared his eight children, and then committed suicide by hanging.

The trouble arose over the death of a woman who, it is stated, was killed by this Mohammedan. The man forced his five wives to cut the woman's body into small pieces.

But when police inquiries began the murderers thought that complete silence was the best means of safety.

Therefore he killed his wives and all the children, tied their bodies together and tried to burn them.

He then started cycling from the scene of the crime, but when his machine broke down he walked a short distance and then committed suicide.—Reuter.

BALLOON DEASSAI

Milan. A toy balloon released by a child here at Christmas has just been picked up in Poland, nearly 1,000 miles away.

The balloon had fastened to a letter to the infant Jesus—Italy's substitute for Santa Claus—saying what Christmas presents the child wanted.—Reuter.

His mind was not in Magnolia-street, nor at the Hat and Cap works of Messrs. Cohen and Montague. Do I make that statement purely on a posteriori grounds? Would Hyman himself have declared any such disturbing thing? I doubt it.

Mrs. Lipshin did not occupy herself with the question. Her domestic labours achieved, she brought forth her Pentateuch, with its Yiddish version interleaved, and bent her black wig towards the dog-eared pages. A butcher's skewer held in her frail but efficient fingers pursued hour beyond hour the awful eloquence. Her voice did not cease from its single intonation, hour beyond hour, until the Friday evening candles flickered in their sockets and she made ready for bed, at length, stumping off in her loose slippers.

Hyman sat snoring in the corner, under the shelf where the samovar, so reverently brought over from Russia, stood. His feeble lower jaw dropped towards his chest. Were there dreams, then, beyond that shallow brow, behind the leaden waters of his eyes? What dreams shall Hyman Lipshin dream in a Magnolia-street kitchen at the heart of the dark city of Doomington?

To-morrow's story will be "Mechanical Justice," by Alexander Kuprin.

"Come then, Hymele!" his mother said, clawing at his shoulder. He followed her as obediently at the age of 30 as at the age of three.

"I come, mother, little mother," he said.

Dream? Dream? What folly! No room for dreams in Doomington. What would Mr. Cohen say about it to Mr. Montague should their third invoice-clerk take to dreaming? Rather more, I should fancy than the old greybeards in the synagogue might have said should they hear that young Hyman Lipshin was possessed of any such malady.

For they did not take much notice of him where he sat in his praying-shawl at a corner of the bench against the women's partition. He was not meritorious in the fervour of his religious transports, nor, on the other hand, an object of suspicion for any laxity in ceremonial observance.

It was true he carried his handkerchief on the Sabbath not round his waist, but in his pocket. That was to be deplored. But no man had ever seen him ascend a tramcar upon the Sabbath. The bearded gentlemen greeted him courteously. They called him, honorifically, Reb Hyman.

Now what I ask you, can have explained the mystery of the pocket atlas? Why Mr. Lipshin should find a pocket atlas an object worthy of his attention at all is mystifying, but why he should secrete it in his prayer-book on no less a day than the feast of the New Year is surely a problem beyond all human solution. Most regrettable—oh! most regrettable. The thing slid from his prayer-book on to the floor, open at a map of Polynesia. The bearded picked it up—not more than two yards away from the Holy Ark. There was a gasp of horror, a bearded whistle of dismay. Hyman Lipshin blushed all round his ears and a long way down his back. He seized the atlas, thrust it in his pocket, and glared his eyes on to his prayer-book.

No explanation was asked for or forthcoming. "It was all so incredible that quite soon everyone ceased to believe it. It was held to be a sort of autumnal hallucination: If it had happened at all, it had happened eight years ago.

Ten years ago, Twelve years ago, Then Uncle Gustava died. Uncle Gustava was quite the supreme uncle of fiction. His name was very rarely mentioned in Magnolia-street or anywhere at all in Doomington. He had lingered but briefly in that city during his pilgrimage between Russia and the Argentine. He had disappeared westwards in the company of a Gentile maiden. There was only this much to be said regarding him.

TESTER AND ABRAHAM'S TWO WINS

(By Rapiet.)

Mr. "Johnny" Heard's three wins on Saturday gave him a four-win advantage over Mr. "Leo" Frost in the jockey championship race. Mr. Frost, the champion jockey, won two events on Saturday. Mr. "Benny" Proulx is fast over-hauling Mr. "Gus" da Roza for third place among the local jockeys, his two wins on Saturday placing him only one behind his rival.

Messrs. Tester and Abraham proved the winning combination among the owners on Saturday, and their first two wins have placed them fairly well up in the list of owners. It was The Tiger's and The Panther's first win of the season.

Navy Hall failed to beat Diana Bay's record of four wins owing to a poor start, and had to be content with a third place.

Below will be found the complete statistics for races at the Valley since January 1, 1933.

POLICE AND BOWLS CHAMPIONSHIP

DRAKE'S RINK SCORES AN EIGHT AGAINST CAREY'S

(By Short Head.)

THE Police recorded another surprise on Saturday when they registered their second successive bowls win of the season. Having beaten Craigengower and the K. C. C. I am beginning to take more serious notice of the rumour that the Police are going to win the Championship.

The best bowling of the season was witnessed at the Valley where W. S. Drake's rink recorded an eight against A. E. Carey's rink to win by 27-19.

First Division.

RECORD ROWING

New South Wales Wins King's Cup

Sydney, May 7.
In today's rowing events the King's Cup was won by New South Wales, Queensland being second and Victoria third. The race was won by 1 1/2 lengths—12 lengths in 14 minutes, a record. The President's prize for sculling was won by Turner (N.S.W.), who finished 15 lengths ahead of Beauchamp (Tasmania), who was a similar distance in advance of Boreham (Queensland). The time of 1.43 2/5 was a record.

NEWS IN BRIEF MR. NEEDA WINS SHAL. CLASSIC

"A" Company, South Wales Borderers, beat the Royal Army Ordnance Corps by 6 sets to 3 in the Hong Kong Area Tennis League.

The bands of the South Wales Borderers and the Lincolns are to meet at cricket and billiards to-morrow. The billiards will be played at the Y.M.C.A.

Italy drew with England in the international soccer match in Rome on Saturday, both sides scoring once.

Mr. V. V. Needa, who is third in the Colony Jockeys' Championship, won the Shanghai Sweepstake on Saturday. He rode Elnor's Royal Sea, covering the 1 1/4 miles in 2.40.2. He also recorded a third place.

Tai Wai-pui, one of the most promising of the Colony lawn tennis players, beat Lai Kwong-tan, another aspirant for the Colony title, by 4-3, 6-1, 6-2 to win the Kwangtung Province Championship.

J. Pook (50-15-28) won the Kowloon Golf Club High Handicap competition yesterday when he beat E. W. Gardner (85-15-70) and S. MacNish (82-15-71). There were 20 entries.

The following were the results of U. S. Baseball games on Saturday:

Full Story Of Peking Jockey Who Would Not Die

Peking, May 5.

SOME amusement and astonishment have been caused by a paragraph appearing in a Chinese paper in Peking reporting the death of an English jockey at the Peking Race Club meeting last week-end. The story, which is completely untrue, is, however, full of circumstantial detail. It says: "At 2 p.m. yesterday, at Paomachang, an Englishman, Po Ah-si, on a dark brown horse bearing the number 2, was riding towards the south when he suddenly fell off and sustained internal injuries as a result of the shock, and of which he died immediately. The Race Club thereupon notified the ticket-holders that ticket No. 2 could be returned or exchanged. "At the same time, the Race

Club authorities informed the West Suburb Police Station by letter requesting that the law court be informed by telephone. A Procurator named Ming Yen, together with a subordinate named Fan Tekuei, were sent to investigate, when it was found that death had been caused by a fall from a horse. Later, a certain British military officer prepared an iron coffin, placed the body therein and buried it."

The only basis for the story appears to be a fall which Mr. S. A. Smith sustained at the races. He was thrown from his mount during a race, but, apart from being temporarily winded and sustaining a certain amount of soreness, he is all right, and, in fact, attended the races the day after his fall.—Reuter.

SOUTH CHINA DEFEAT

(By OUTSIDE LEFT.)

THE sensation of sensations was provided on Saturday, when South China, contenders for First Division League honours, were defeated by the Navy by 3 goals to 1 in a very good game.

TO say that South China lost because their players were off form and that luck was against them is all wrong—the better team won—and deservedly.

ONE thing that all football fans can be certain of, and that is, South China were down in the mouth because Ip Pak-wa, Tam Kong-pak and Wong Mee-shun were not with them.

HAD these three soccer stars been playing a totally different aspect would have been put on the game and the chances of a South China victory would have been a certainty.

CHINESE soccer fans will think it very funny that a team that carried, or were responsible for the winning of the four major soccer events, should go under to a team of the Navy's present strength, but the fact remains that South China, although they arrived on the field with the feeling they were going to win, were too certain of themselves, and this played a large part in their downfall.

THEIR equalising goal after ten minutes of play was a stroke of fortune. Leung Tat-wing misjudged the ball in its flight to shoulder it over Sinden instead of heading it.

CHENG SHUI-HONG made a well-come return to form, but all the support he derived was from Fung King-cheong, his inside, Kam Cheung-lam, being too selfish.

One player that showed a definite falling off of form was Leung Wing-chui, the Colony's inter-club centre half and South China's pivot. Time after time he sent up wild passes to his forwards.

FUNG KING-CHEONG was the pick of South China's forwards. He fed his wings perfectly and had been less unselfish he might have turned the tables on the Navy.

FOR the Navy Shiden in goal played a safe game and was not responsible for South China's goal.

THE Navy backs, Buchanan and Forrest, were very good, especially the latter, whose neat clearances and well-judged tackling of South China's right wing combination, bottled up that part of the opposing team in the second half.

little though it was. He was not married to the Gentle maiden. He developed ranches and converted them later into cinematograph companies. It was rumoured the Gentle maiden was dead without issue.

Uncle Gustave in due course died too, and confirmed the rumour. He left a handsome fortune to his brother's son, Hyman Lipshin, of Magnolia-street, in Doomington.

And then the mystery of the Pocket Atlas was resolved. Hyman Lipshin promptly took a ticket to Otaheite.

I wonder if it is all clear now? Surely it is. There was never a time when an infinite nostalgia for far place did not possess the sad little mind of Hyman Lipshin. Whether he checked moneys for the further glories of Messrs. Cohen and Montague, whether he stood meekly in his corner of the synagogue reciting the Nineteen Prayers, enjoying a mild prestige due rather to his mother's piety than his own merits, whether he dozed under the samovar in the Magnolia-street kitchen—his soul was over the seas and far away. He was possessed by a planetary glamour. He ascended the fir slopes of Kirishimi or lay down under the dateland palms of the oasis of Nefta. He penetrated the paleolithic caverns of Puente Viego, and beat the swamps of Papua. The surf thundered against the outer reefs of the coral islands. Lulled by that organ music, a scarlet lily behind his ear, his fingers idly paddled the pellucid waters of the lagoon.

Otaheite, mainly. Bread-fruit, yam-yams, colossal turtles, coconuts, green macaws screeching in the branches, a scarlet-tufted monkey swinging by his tail. Otaheite.

He was no dynamic young man. They would merely at length have transported him to the cemetery on the confines of Doomington (for he had paid the burial dues punctiliously from an early age), and Killmanjaro, Sunium, Nebraska, would have dissolved equally into undistinguished dust.

But, as I have said, Uncle Gustave died. And Hyman took a ticket for Otaheite. But to go to Otaheite, and to be there are not the same things. Let me insist on making that clear. For it was not the thunder of the surf he heard in Otaheite, nor in Ravenna the sighing of the pine-branches. It was the sirens of the factories in Doomington he heard. He did not hear the dusky maidens chanting as they twined their hair with flowers, nor the bronzed peasants hallooing behind their oxen. He heard the old men and women wailing on the Fast of the Destroyed Temple. How should little Hyman Lipshin detach from his ear drums these ancestral voices and from his timid nostrils expel the fumes of the dark city?

Otaheite was a failure, as Ravenna was destined to be. He fared forth from the coral islands towards the creeks of the Amazon, and later found himself upon the peaks of the Rockies. The voices were not stilled. And though the most superb cuisine of the expensive continent was laid before him upon such plate and flanked by such silver as Sennacherib would not have scorned, he found himself aching for the halibut steeped in the fat of chickens, and the stuffed varrenikas and the crisp blintzes of his mother, though never in Magnolia-street had the prospect of them caused any special excitement in his bosom. Gentlemen of considerable accomplishments, and ladies of no mean beauty courted him. But he remembered odd half-hours he had spent in the Magnolia-street parlour with Mr. and Mrs. Levine, his mother's tenants, and wondered how he had not perceived what wisdom was theirs and how graceful a humour.

Thereon he found himself in the Mediterranean basin, disconsolately wandering between Stambul and Oran, hoping to find in Sidilian Castrogiovanni or in the holy Tunisian city of Kairwan the glory he had dreamed of in the offices of Messrs. Cohen and Montague. He did not succeed, nor in Nauplia, nor in Burgos. The great factories interposed themselves; he heard only the machine drumming and, closer at hand, the old men chanting in the synagogue. A curious obstinacy seized him, sapless little man that he was. He wandered wretchedly from continent to continent, from bleak northern fastness to lush tropic glade, seeking the lost glamour. Doomington was not to be dislodged. He was himself Doomington.

And then a letter reached him in some obscure corner of the world from his mother in Magnolia-street. (She was a lady of the older sort, and though she might now so easily have transferred her black wig and Pentateuch to some horrid mansion in the Gentile suburbs, she would not for the world be dislodged from Magnolia-street, from her next-door neighbours or the synagogue round the corner.)

Mrs. Lipshin was, in fact, ill. She hoped she might set eyes on her son again before she died, though the strange demon had withheld him so long from her. Her son sped home by whatsoever most speedy and costly mode of travel was available. He did not arrive too late.

But when, some weeks later, she died and all that had seemed to bind him to Doomington was thus dissolved, he did not make swift preparations to render himself once again in the world's lost places. For indeed, no sooner had he set foot once more in Doomington than the Otaheite and Ravenna that had eluded him became manifest.

He heard the thunder of the surf and the chanting of the dusky maidens. He heard the hallooing of the bronzed peasants behind their oxen. He appeared duly among the old men of the synagogue, but now that their wailing was in his ears he did not hear it. Now that the smoke pall hung all day over his head his vision pursued brilliantly and ruthlessly the superb contours of Etna. He did not move from the small home in Magnolia-street, even though his mother was dead and the Levines long since gone. He was appeared in the presence of their ghosts. He wandered from Magnolia-street into Aubrey-street, through the drab places of Doomington, linking thus the Carpathians with the Blue Mountains of Australia. His soul was fulfilled its desire. He sat meekly among the greybeards of the synagogue, but there was no second scandal of an impious Pocket Atlas slipping down from the sacred pages of the prayer-book. He saw now those tawny pillars of Corinth which he had been blind to when his physical eyes beheld them. His Magnolia-street candle was the infinite terracing of lights above the harbour of Hong Kong.

But it had been Otaheite mainly, green macaws, hairy coconuts, tufted monkeys. And when he died it was the thunder of the surf among the coral reefs he heard, as he lay paddling his fingers among the pellucid waters of the lagoon. Otaheite was a scarlet lily thrust behind his cold ear.

MR. FISCHER'S $87.30 ON STICKYPAST MR. HEARD AGAIN LEADING JOCKEY

BRILLIANT RIDING BY MR. BUTLER

SUBSTANTIAL DIVIDENDS FEATURED THE SIXTH ANNUAL RACE MEETING AT THE VALLEY SATURDAY. STICKYPAST, WITH $87.30, HEADING THE LIST OF ELEVEN PONIES WHICH PAID OVER 5 TO 1 ODDS.

MR. W. G. FISCHER HAD THE SATISFACTION OF PAYING OUT DIVIDENDS OF $87.30 AND $65.80 ON STICKYPAST AND KRATA VIZ, WHILE THE GADWALL (MR. J. W. HOPE) PAID $67.20.

The best riding of the afternoon was witnessed when Mr. E. O. Butler won the Potamun Handicap on Devon from Imperial Hall. He achieved in the last twenty yards what appeared to be an impossibility, and his ride was probably the best yet seen this season.

Portia, with Mr. "Johnny" Heard up, fulfilled expectations when she won the Australian race in record time. Mr. Heard, who secured three wins and four seconds in seven starts, again proved to be the champion jockey. He now leads Mr. Frost by four wins.

In a day of upsets only three favorites recorded wins—Warrington, The Panther and Portia. Jungle Jim and Royal Flush were placed, but Don, National Day, Toby and Adam all failed to secure places.

Mr. "Benny" Proulx again enjoyed a successful afternoon, registering two wins, a second, and two thirds in seven starts. He rode Lady Peel's Lucy Glitters into second place in the Victoria Park Handicap, only two lengths separating his mount from the record-equalling Portia. He has succeeded Mr. D. Black, who is at present on home leave, as Lady Peel's jockey.

The Novices race attracted 19 starters, but Adam, the favorite, was badly left at the starting gate thus enabling Mr. Yue Shun-wa to record a win on Orlando. This race provided dividends of $34.70, $16.10, $37.30 and $67.20.

DOLLAR STEADY AT 1/4.
Silver And Pound Show Weakness.
No further change in the local dollar took place during the week-end, the demand price this morning being 1/4.
Silver prices declined heavily on Saturday, both spot and forward quotations closing at 18% as against 19 and 19 1/16 respectively on Friday.
The pound in relation to the American dollar showed a little weakness on Saturday, the London on New York cross rate closing at £-G$3.96 as against £-G$3.97 on Friday, while the New York on London rate closed at £-G$3.97 3/4 as compared with £-G$3.98 1/2 on Friday.

OGDEN MILLS BUYS SHORT RAILWAY IN UTAH
Carson City.
Mr. Ogden Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury has purchased the Virginia and Truckee Railway, a short line running out of Reno. Mr. Mills intends to accelerate silver mining in the old Comstock mines. Mr. Mills recently inspected the property in company with former President Herbert Hoover, who worked in the mines at Virginia City shortly after he left Stanford University.

During their present stay in the Colony, they intend to visit Canton and Macao. Their plans for spending their time in Hong Kong are indefinite, as matters have been left in the hands of the Peacock Motion Picture Co., who entertained Wheeler and Woolsey to a luncheon party to-day.
The travellers stated that they had had a very entertaining time in Shanghai, where they had met Major General Borrett, G.O.C. China Command and Col. Nosworthy. Mr. Wheeler, who stated that his firm desire was to procure shorts and a topee, said that in future he and Woolsey would make only two films a year. They had obtained much local colour during their tour, which they would probably find of help to them in their future pictures.
On being questioned regarding the depression in Hollywood, Mr. Wheeler stated that the various film companies were now hiring outside producers to make films which were sold under the name of the company concerned.
Mr. Woolsey paid Hong Kong the tribute of thinking that it possessed the finest harbour in the world. He believed it to be even more beautiful than Sydney harbour. He said that it was his intention to climb the Peak.
He commented on the style of architecture of the houses in Kowloon, and asked if they were built in the British style.

FLAMES SHOOT OUT OF SEA.
Phenomenon Off S. W. Africa.
Swakopmund, South West Africa.
Vivid streaks of flame shooting up from the sea at night have caused astonishment at Swakopmund.
Next morning there was a strong smell of burned sulphur which clung to the beach for several miles, and bathers found that the water had an unpleasant taste—like rotten eggs.
On several days, too, large bubbles have been seen constantly rising to the surface of the sea and bursting just off the mole, as though the water underneath were boiling.—Reuter.

NAZI PROTEST TO AUSTRIA.
The official attitude to this party has been indicated in the following message.—"I am instructed by the Government to inform you that your visit is not exactly desirable, but we are taking all measures for your security." This message was given to Dr. Frank on his arrival by the Police Vice-President.
Dr. Frank replied.—"Please convey to the Government, my thanks for this amiable reception."
